

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method and apparatus for sensing the operational temperature of a power amplifier within a mobile telephone is disclosed. A sensor circuit is connected to sense the voltage at the input of the bias current supply to the power amplifier. This voltage being indicative of the voltage drop over the biased transistor of the power amplifier will also be indicative of the operating temperature of the power amplifier.